

There are many safe ways kids can learn about fire. You can learn about it on television. You can go to your library and check out some books about fire. You can ask your parents to make a fire in your fireplace or another safe area. You can have yourself a marshmallow roast or build a campfire-so long as an adult is right there with you. These are all responsible ways for kids to learn about fire. If you're curious, ask your parents about one of these.
