

It's everyone's responsibility to keep an eye out for younger kids whenever there is water around. It doesn't take much water for kids to drown—they've done so in toilet bowls and even puddles before, because they don't have the muscle to pick themselves back up if they fall down in a funny position. Water is one of the most dangerous things to little kids. So be a responsible bigger kid to all the littler kids around you, and keep an eye out for their safety!

COLOR N' LEARN SAFETY
www.keepyourchildsafes.org