This picture may look harmless enough, but there's a hidden danger lurking right in plain sight. Can you tell what it is? It's the balloons!

Balloons are fun and great for kids, but they are also a nasty little choking hazard. Kids put them in their mouth or chew on it, and the balloon gets caught in their throat. The nasty thing about them is, if you accidentally swallow a piece of balloon or get it stuck in your throat, the rubbery texture of the balloon makes it almost impossible to remove. It also works just like a natural diaphragm, blocking your airway. So keep safe, and avoid putting balloons in your mouth. Be sure to keep an eye out for little kids as well, since they put everything in their mouth. If a balloon pops, be sure to pick up all the pieces and throw them in the trash, so that little kids don't end up with them.
