

You'd never find a pro skateboarder pulling stunts without a helmet on. That's because all professional skateboarders know they need their head just as much as their body, and it's hard to do tricks when you banged your noggin and now think you're a talking cucumber from the Andromeda galaxy. So before you hit the skate park, be sure to remember the most important part of sports: your head!