Loyalty

Loyalty means being faithful to someone else, supporting them and keeping your allegiance no matter what. Family members are often loyal to one another. Loyalty can also exist between friends, groups, or even an abstract entity

Why would we want to be loyal to someone (or something)? _____

Loyalty is generally seen as a good character trait to have, because others value it. It's nice to know someone will always have your back, that they'll stand by your side and support you no matter what. But loyalty can sometimes have a dark side, too. For example, think of all the bad things that happened because people were loyal to Hitler. Write about a situation where maintaining your loyalty would be bad:
